HINTON HIGH SCHOOL

Hinton, West Virginia

Foreword

School days are never forgotten. The memories of the "good ole days" will linger with us for the rest of our lives. . .

We, the staff of the 1956 DART, hope that the contents of this book will preserve some of these memories so that in the years to come, you may turn back the pages of time and relive some of the happy times, the warm friendships, and eventful days of your life at Hinton High School. . .

Dedicated

Mr. C. D. McCormick

TO ONE . . .

who has contributed not only his talents as a teacher, but who has also contributed much to the progress of his community, county, and state.

Because of his interest in all the activities of Hinton High School and his appealing personality, we have come to love and appreciate Mr. Mac. During his 30 years of service to schools he has rendered help and guidance to many a student. He has made our high school days richer, more pleasant, and more profitable. It is in recognition of his outstanding service that we dedicate this year's DART.

Senior Prophecy

Hinton, West Virginia March 22, 1970

TO OUR SENIOR SPONSORS:

No doubt you are surprised at this letter, but I am fairly bursting with good news. I can actually tell you what every one of the graduates of '56 is doing. I knew you would want to hear, for although we are scattered over the continents, we still take an interest in each other, don't we?

I was touring Europe last summer and was at the time in Switzerland preparing to climb the Alps with a party of friends. When we had climbed quite a distance, a snowstorm began to rage and we were forced to seek shelter in a monastery. Climbers were allowed to rest here, so we were made comfortable. Sitting before a log fire, I remembered it was May 24, the same date on which, fourteen years before, I had graduated from Hinton High School. I began to think of all my classmates, and to wonder where they were and what they were doing. I grew very drowsy, and soon the fire seemed to fade away and I was seeing familiar scenes.

I saw Rube Williams, our beloved class president, working for General Motors. I beheld Bill Sawyers, whose ambition had led him upward until he was now judge of the supreme court. I saw a crowd of girls entering a building. Inside the building was Patty Blankenship making a great speech, "Advice to Lovelorn Girls". The scene changed from here to a far distant one. While in a great audience, which seemingly no man could number I saw on the stage before me, John Wills, Betty Jo Mann, William Smith, Kay Keaton, and Margaret Bussard making their debut on the acting stage. The next scene took me into an apartment house. There I found two of my classmates, Nancy Sue Stuck and Dottie Hill, occupying adjoining apartments, keeping house for their better halves - Ducky Meador and Charlie Meador. Then I was in a great magazine publishing house. Here were Don Hedrick and Janice Farley making designs for magazine covers.

My next wandering took me into a great hospital in New York City. Whom should I see but John (Doc.) Starcher, now world specialist, in conference with the head nurse, Patty Bolling and her assistant, Barbara Keaton. In the same hospital was Peggy Talman, chief Dietitian. In the distance I could see a cozy little bungalow. The front door opened and out walked no other than Betty Sims McKinney looking extremely happy. "Well, I should say that Ronald was not angry with her now."

Senior Prophecy

Next I was at Duke University. Steve Fife was president of the college. And as I wandered through the college buildings I found Sue Richmond coaching the girl's basketball team. In the domestic science department I found Rosa Butler Keaton conducting classes in cooking and sewing. In another building Janet Williams was giving instructions in public speaking. As the college scene faded from view I was standing before a large glass front building. On the signboard was written "J. Burroughs and S. Lindsay, Owners and Agents for Cadillac Automobiles". On down the street I found myself entering a radio broadcasting station. In the broadcasting room we found George Davidson playing a trombone solo accompanied by Barbara Ann Haynes at the piano. Then I began to see queer looking people and stranger sights. I found myself before a Mission School in Africa. I was surprised, for I saw Edna Thomas and Emily Keaton, as missionary teachers in that far distant land. I heard a peculiar noise and thought it was some cannibals coming after me. But no, it could not be. For I was again in a crowded street. I beheld a circus parade headed by a steam calliope, coming down the street. As the parade passed I recognized my old classmate Jim Bob Lilly in the disguise of a clown and Blubby Wilson as the lion tamer. Also, advertised on some banners were Billie Peaco, the fat lady; Ronald Thompson, the tall man; Robert Back, the strong man; Virginia Lilly, the snake charmer; and George Allen, the sword swallower. As we went into the big tent in came some beautiful white horses. I recognized Joan Briers Fox, Helen Richmond Bennett, Shirley Hyden, and Rosalie Peaco as the bare back riders. The girls on the trapeze looked familiar and as I watched they proved to be Jean Brabb, Betty and Eloise Burdette, and Carol Buckland. Down front selling popcorn were Danny Crawford and James Brabb. I realize now how skilled my classmates have become as I watch their many performances. As the circus scene fades out I saw many more of my old classmates in different occupations. Joe Bennett is now a famous clothes designer in Paris while Gary Arthur has taken over his father's job as a safe bus driver. Joyce and Ruth Cales are designing dresses for women in New York. Charles Cashwell, Larry Wickline, and Russell Fitzwater are now retired from a successful army career. We see a lot of our old classmates are happily married and raising fine families. We find that chief among the bachelors is still Stewart Fink.

Soon I could see my classmates no longer but in a quick glance I see that each and every one of them has done a lot to make the class of '56 long remembered. We are having a reunion of all of them in the near future and we would like for the senior class sponsors to take part in this great event.

Lovingly, your old classmates,

Barbara Ann Haynes
